off new work. guys, I've successfully installed Ubuntu 16.04 on my Macbook Pro, but when I try to boot it, it starts to boot and then drops back to a black screen. I tried the UEFI setting to AHCI and also tried using the nomodeset option. Any idea what I might be doing wrong? Can anyone recommend a good GNOME-based, native Linux music player? I use elementary but have a few other favorites !partner I ZeptoTechX perhaps these can help you ZeptoTechX perhaps these can help you: Canonical's partner repositories provide packages a location for software vendors to publish applications. The repo itself can be added by running this in a terminal: `Â» sudo add-apt-repository "deb $(lsb_release -sc) partner" Â»` ZeptoTechX: ZoY: in a terminal: `sudo apt-get update && sudo apt-get install openssh-server` ZoY: you will need to change the port depending on what port you have chosen The music player they recommend seems like it's not for GNOME. It seems a bit bloated and heavy for my requirements I just want something that lets me search by genre and see all the songs, preferably a playlist Like ID3 tags I was able to boot into the Ubuntu installer, but then I get a black screen after selecting Try Ubuntu without installing zepto: your music player will make choices as to how to import the songs (into the player), but the player will import the information; usually something like ID3/WMA (Windows media audio) files. Gnome & Ubuntu default music player for GNOME is rhythmbox ZoY: you will need to change the port lotuspsychje: Are you familiar with this issue? ZoY: or is this a managed connection?
