Recovering A new study found that on average, it takes four months before patients who suffer a heart attack get the type of treatment that would likely prevent a second or even a third attack. "The magnitude of the delays in getting care after a first heart attack are quite stunning," said study author Robert Weiss, a cardiologist at Brigham and Women's Hospital and Harvard Medical School. "It doesn't mean that people didn't try and go somewhere after they had their first heart attack," Weiss said. But, he
