. . . . A: For the OS X version of Illustrator the quickest way to check all running apps is to use Activity Monitor (see link). Then in order to check it in Adobe Illustrator, go to Window->Version Info and click on the License tab. Q: phpmyadmin connecting to mysql from remote server I have a website that runs off of phpbb forum and I'm trying to set up phpmyadmin to be able to access it. When I try to access phpmyadmin from my remote server I get the following message: For security reasons, PHPMyAdmin has been configured to only allow connections from localhost and when the local MySQL server is running on port 3306. Please change the config.inc.php passwords to a secure value and then contact your hosting provider. The thing is that the localhost is local to the server but how do I go about getting the local mysql port to match the remote port? A: I had this problem and had to set up PHPMyAdmin to listen on a different port. I was already using the remote server to serve php-files, so I just copied the index.php to /usr/share/phpmyadmin/. Now you have to make sure that you phpinfo() is called only from the local server. If you're running php-cgi/php5.2+ you can use these lines in your.htaccess:

---

php_flag display_errors off php_flag display_startup_errors off php_flag register_globals off php_admin_value open_basedir /usr/share/phpmyadmin That tells the php-cgi to not load phpinfo() and to use open_basedir for the /usr/share/phpmyadmin. Your
