The Fellini of porn.The race to claim the most coveted accolade in the realm of luxury dining was still on when the judges, the senior editors at The World's 50 Best Restaurants, made their decision. But it was the one of their deciding criteria that is both weighty and ultimately decisive: a restaurant's ability to deliver high-quality food and drink to customers at a fair and reasonable price. That was a tall order for most of the contenders this year, which included the first Chinese restaurants in the top 50: Din Tai Fung in No. 1 Hong Kong and Da Xi in No. 24 Beijing. For the first time in 50 years, two Chinese restaurants made the cut; for the first time since China opened its doors to foreign investment in the 1990s, all five of the country's restaurants occupied the top five spots. The number of entrants in the top 50 also set an all-time record. Of the 140 restaurants that applied for the 2015 list, a record 102 made the cut. For restaurateurs, it was a landmark year. "The acknowledgement of what we're doing is validation of what we've been striving for," said Tadashi Ono, a chef and co-owner of Tōsō in Ginza, in Tokyo. "The 50 Best list is the industry's biggest client, and they're the biggest single restaurant influence." This year's winners join an elite group of restaurants, which includes this year's winners, who have been deemed the best of the best of the best. Among them are 14 establishments that appear in the 2015 Top 100 list of the World's Best Restaurants, which was released earlier this year. "In 25 years of conducting the 50 Best survey, I've never seen
