To describe the prevalence of suicidal ideation among teenage girls and boys and the associated factors. School-based, cross-sectional study with 859 (572 girls and 287 boys) teenagers, aged 13 to 18 years, from all state capitals of Brazil in 2008. The dependent variable was suicidal ideation in the past 12 months. Data were analyzed using Pearson's chi-square and linear regression models. About 13.3% of the participants reported suicidal ideation in the past 12 months. There was no significant difference in the prevalence of suicidal ideation between girls and boys (odds ratio = 0.74; 95% confidence interval = 0.46-1.19).

Students with higher educational level were about two times more likely to have suicidal ideation than those with lower educational levels. In addition, suicide attempts were strongly associated with a history of physical and sexual abuse. The findings underscore the importance of developing and evaluating protective measures in schools to reduce adolescent suicide rates in Brazil.Aging causes a progressive increase in the rate of appearance of various conditions, from dental disease, to dementia and other cognitive disorders, to heart disease.
