Preproenkephalin (PPE) mRNA expression in the adult rat brain following status epilepticus induced by pilocarpine. There is evidence suggesting a role for opioid peptides in mediating and modulating the acute effects of pilocarpine-induced status epilepticus (SE) in rats. Previous studies have shown that status epilepticus enhances preproenkephalin (PPE) mRNA expression in the hippocampus, and that this upregulation is associated with beta-endorphin immunoreactivity. This study examines the expression of PPE mRNA in the rat brain following acute SE induced by pilocarpine (380 mg/kg, i.p.). Brain tissues from SE rats and controls (control: saline-treated) were removed 24 h after SE. RNA was extracted and hybridized in situ using digoxigenin-labeled riboprobes for PPE. In control brain, PPE mRNA was seen in the dentate gyrus, CA1, CA3 and ventro-lateral preoptic nuclei of the hypothalamus and ventral tegmental area. The pattern of PPE mRNA expression was similar to that previously observed using beta-endorphin and tyrosine hydroxylase riboprobes. In pilocarpine-treated animals, PPE mRNA expression was significantly elevated in the ventral
