Comparing the measured clustering results obtained for the three classifiers, we find that the "softmax" is the better choice for the problem we face here. Study of the underlying state of the system [Sec12] ----- The three networks used in this study are feeding on the time series of the different physical quantities of the system measured at the crossing points of the temperature threshold, and are based on a generic description of the dynamics of the system. As highlighted in the Methods section, the physical quantities we monitor for this experiment are: The time series of the average kinetic energy of the electrons in the inner shells (EKS), and of the excited hydrogen nuclei (EHS).The time series of the wavelength of the edge of the absorption-emission resonance corresponding to the metastable levels of the hydrogen atoms (LAM). Therefore, we can obtain three time series of the discrete counts of the values of these physical quantities using the "softmax" of each classifier. Since these time series are of large length and contain few fluctuations, we can easily make the hypothesis of a statistical independence in the underlying space. For this reason, the data are extracted from the global time series of the statistical realization of the dynamics of the system

I have a visual basic for words macro, and what I want to do is insert a linebreak after every 40 lines. So the first line goes on line 1, the second line on line 41, etc. I found some code for this, but it's really ugly. There is no more elegant way than this: Dim i As Integer Dim myRange As Word.Range Set myRange = ActiveDocument.Range For i = 1 To myRange.Lines.Count If i Mod 40 = 0 Then myRange.InsertBreak Type:=wdLineBreak myRange.MoveRight Unit:=wdCharacter, Count:=1 End If Next i How can I do this in a more elegant way? Maybe even a macro that automatically searches for 40 lines and inserts it? A: You could put this in a subroutine and call it from main document. For example: Sub AddLineBreak() Dim wd As Word.Application Set wd = New Word.Application Dim doc As Word.Document Set doc = wd.Documents.Add doc.Range.InsertBreak wdLineBreak doc.Range.Insert After:=ActiveDocument.Range.End wd.Documents. ba244e880a
