Understanding how the workspace works Photoshop is usually installed as a _container program,_ which means it incorporates the other programs you need to create web pages. For this book, we've had to get a bit technical. Our example is called Layers and workspaces. (Layers are discussed in the section "Applying and stacking layers," later in this chapter.) In most cases, you can use the original image file you saved from your scanner or camera and work on it using Photoshop's Layers, Selection, and Adjustment tools. You can't save a page the same way you can save a photo of a subject using any camera or scanner, but you can still export the image as a TIFF, JPEG, or any other type of file. If you save the image, you then have the option of working on it within the Photoshop container or using an image in another program to save it. (For more about saving images, see Chapter 18.) A great place to see the various types of files used to save and create images is on your computer's Save As dialog box. (You can open this dialog box from the Edit tab on the menu

Menu “every class is a front page to your life” by:Julie Baum,Jessie Childs We are not defined by our job, our families, or our surroundings. The things we can't change define us. Every day I am amazed by my job, the people around me, and the places we live. The things we are passionate about, the people we love, and the wants that we really want. In short, we are not defined by our job, our families, or our surroundings. The things we can't change define us. We are defined by the goals we set for ourselves and the commitments we make. We are defined by the relationships we cultivate with ourselves, with others, and with the world around us. We are defined by the things we believe in. For over a year, I have been working with a group of students in senior level psychology classes. We meet every Tuesday for one hour to talk about the struggle that comes with being a recent college graduate. We have talked about the responsibility that comes with being a senior, the stress of going to college, and the anxiety that comes with being a young adult. We have talked about the decisions we must make, both big and small. We have discussed how we want to make ourselves better people. We have taken many different paths and are constantly improving. We are not defined by our job, our families, or our surroundings. We are defined by the goals we set for ourselves and the commitments we make. We are defined by the relationships we cultivate with ourselves, with others, and with the world around us. We are defined by the things we believe in. One example is the concept of “time.” Students seem to struggle with words like “earlier and later” and “before and after.” In my classes, we discuss when something would be happening and what time it was. Students struggled with this concept. I felt confident that I knew what they meant, and I knew it would be easy to explain and
