I have a model that has only one column and one index. public class Row { [Key] [DatabaseGenerated(DatabaseGeneratedOption.Identity)] public int RowID { get; set; } public string ValidCode { get; set; } } I create a new row and it's id value is 1. I use the following code to get the id of the row. int id = db.Rows.Single(x => x.RowID == 1).RowID; In the controller, I do two things. First, I call an action that returns a new view model with a new row with the following code. public ActionResult(int validCode) { ViewModel model = new ViewModel();

Infiltrates and changes in lung picture that had developed in nine patients were caused mainly by pleural effusion. In a further six patients neither the initial nor the later symptoms were related to pleural effusion. All patients were treated by incision, partial or total paracentesis, and drainage of pleural fluid. In most of the cases this treatment led to remission of the symptoms within a week. A general course and a future course of the disease are unclear.Sales Director Compensation Description Description About the Role The Sales Director will be responsible for engaging with interested parties in order to find them qualified clients that can benefit from our services.
