For example, if I write a Button on the page (the contents of an UpdatePanel) then the scriptmanager has to refresh the contents of the updatepanel when the page loads (in order to bring up that button on the page). However, if my code behind is the one that programatically generates the button, the page loads but the button is never shown. This is because the button is programatically generated and in this case, I have to do a postback to display it. Is there a way that the ASP.NET scriptmanager does a postback when the page loads? Or do I have to manually call the server each time I want 09e8f5149f
