Thus, the present invention provides a process for producing an organic solid electrolytic capacitor. That is, in the present invention, when the doping ratio of the compound of Formula (I) into the compound of Formula (II) is 0.05% or more, preferably 0.1% or more, and especially preferably 0.5% or more, the electrically conductive polymer containing the compound of Formula (I) can be obtained in a good yield. On the other hand, when the doping ratio of the compound of Formula (I) into the compound of Formula (II) is less than 0.05%, the electrically conductive polymer containing the compound of Formula (I) may be present as a part of the precipitate of the electrically conductive polymer containing the compound of Formula (II). In this case, the electrically conductive polymer containing the compound of Formula (I) may be the same as that described in the above 4th Invention. Thus, the present invention provides a process for producing an organic solid electrolytic capacitor containing an electrically conductive polymer. Here, in the present invention, the compound of Formula (I) is used without taking into account the influence of the substituent groups R1, R2 and R3. By doping the compound of Formula (I) into the compound of Formula (II) in the present invention, it is possible to obtain an electrically conductive polymer, which can be a solid electrolytic capacitor, in a good yield. Thus, the present invention provides a process for producing
