I understand using promises it will be easier to read but as I am still a noob learning how to use these, I'm assuming I will have to find a better way to call a web-service. So far I have this class that is running a web-service using the receiveFruits request. What I want is that if there are any errors to be thrown up on the error function (error: function(error, response){console.log(error);}). Currently it is returning a 3da54e8ca3
