It can be downloaded from the below link. The Lamborghini Huracán Super Trofeo Team from Hungary won the 2019 European Super Trofeo Championship, held in Bucharest, Romania, on 6 June 2019. The race was shortened due to heavy rain and the organisers, as per last year's results, decided to refund the winner and runners-up. Laurent Mercier was first in front of Athanasios Stefanou, Alexander Haase and Patric Niederhauser in the first race, but went on to lead the pack in the second race. After the first group of four battled it out, Patric Niederhauser and Alexander Haase came to the fore. Alexander Haase took the first victory, while Laurent Mercier returned home second. The third and last race featured a three-way battle, consisting of Alexander Haase, Patric Niederhauser and Athanasios Stefanou. A perfect job by Alexander Haase – who was ahead and outside pole position in all seven laps – once again proved decisive as he took the win ahead of Niederhauser and Stefanou. The story of the race was however different. After the first two laps Stefanou was in the lead, but on the final, long lap he was already struggling with the pace of his supercar. He pulled off track and when he returned, to his surprise, the race was already done. Athanasios Stefanou took the final podium spot. 82138339de
