In February 2013, Badboy released Wave Test Manager, a test management tool that lets any computer in your organization become an "agent" for running Badboy Tests. Anybody can then run scripts on the agent computers via a centralized web interface called the "Test Manager". The Test Manager queues and schedules Tests to run on the desired computers when they become available and emails results when they are finished. You can't fail a Wave Test Manager test. Any Scripts that do that will be "retried" until they succeed. Here's what you can do with Wave Test Manager: - Queue and schedule new tests - Track the run status of tests - View test history - Upload Results - Track Results - Get email notifications - Contact the Wave team for support or other questions

Features: - A simple web interface for running scripts on computers - Allows users to queue and schedule tests - Allows users to track the status of tests - Allows users to view the results of tests - Allows users to view the history of tests - Allows users to upload results to Wave servers - Allows users to email results - Notifies the Wave team via email when there are failures

Requirements: - Requires a web server - Requires access to the Internet - Requires the Mozilla Firefox or Internet Explorer browser to use the Wave Manager or Wave Test Browser

Pre-Requisites: Before installing and using Wave Test Manager, you should first set up your network for your organization. We recommend reading our article on Setting Up Your Network for Using Wave Manager. You will also need to install the latest version of the Mozilla Firefox or Internet Explorer browser.

Description: Websense Web Site Security (WSS) is designed to help organizations prevent web-based attacks and protect themselves from exposure to such attacks. It is a cloud-based solution that, unlike other products, does not require a physical server or dedicated IT personnel. WSS manages and monitors web sites with a customizable security policy, leveraging Web Application Firewall and DDoS protection. It makes URL filtering and protection even simpler for organizations with large sites and, thanks to Web Site Optimization, can remove the most common performance bottlenecks in your sites, without affecting your visitors. WSS is web-site security as a service. It includes industry-standard components such as content filters, a whitelist and a honeypot, and it provides thorough reporting and visibility into your site's traffic and security status.
