The sewer pipe is typically made of cast iron, plastic, clay, fiberglass, or some other suitable material. The pipe is usually buried underground by being placed in an appropriate excavation that is then filled with concrete. Once the concrete is dry, the excavation is covered with a suitable surface material, such as asphalt. Sewer lines are prone to leaks when they are damaged by excavation. In a typical system, an opening is formed in the excavation, and an access door is placed in the opening to allow an inspection of the sewer line. The door is typically removed after the inspection is complete.Pages Friday, January 24, 2013 First FLL Game - Pacers at Hoys It's the first day of the FLL finals. I've taught my class tonight so I was late to the party this morning. It actually took me a while to grab my stuff this morning because I had forgotten that I needed to wash my car (yep, I'm in Florida). Well, anyway,
