The latest version is here: acute respiratory distress syndrome in a patient with pancreatic cancer.

Treatment-associated acute respiratory distress syndrome (ARDS) is a potentially life-threatening adverse event of cancer chemotherapy. Most reported cases of treatment-associated ARDS have been attributed to single agents, such as docetaxel, doxorubicin, or vinorelbine. Gemcitabine is one of the most commonly used single-agent chemotherapeutic agents for pancreatic cancer. The authors present the first case of ARDS associated with gemcitabine for pancreatic cancer. A 64-year-old man with metastatic adenocarcinoma of the pancreas received 2.0 g of gemcitabine over 30 minutes every 14 days. On the 7th day of the fourth cycle, the patient developed mild dyspnea, fever, and leukocytosis. An urgent chest X-ray showed diffuse bilateral infiltrates. The patient was transferred to the intensive care unit (ICU) and received high-dose methylprednisolone and broad-spectrum antibiotics. After 2 days, the patient's respiratory status deteriorated. The patient required intubation, mechanical ventilation, and vasoactive drugs. The patient's lungs required 35 days to recover. Gemcitabine-associated ARDS can be fatal, even when

In a statement that was read out by Prime Minister Manmohan Singh, the Dalai Lama said that now " the Tibetan government in exile is ready to cooperate with China and is also ready to take part in the U.N. peace talks." The statement was in response to a question during the question-and-answer session following the funeral. Asked if he had any final message to convey to the world, the Dalai Lama replied: "Yes, I believe that the world and China must work together for world peace and prosperity." Asked if he had any final message to convey to his people in Tibet, he said: "I have sent a message to my people to hope that they will enjoy the same freedom of speech as other nations. This is the message that I am sending to all people in the world." Later, he expressed his gratitude to the United Nations and the United States for their friendship to the Tibetans and to the international community in general. "I am grateful to all people who are trying to help us in a peaceful and democratic way," he said. The 57-year-old Dalai Lama died on Tuesday at the age of 83 after a battle with illness. I'm not
