The new report claims that a deal has been struck that would see Windy Hill fold into Insomniac, and the creative hub would become the new home for the development of Insomniac's flagship lineup of PlayStation 4 exclusives, along with the development of a number of their mobile and PC titles. The report also details that the two sides have been working on this since "at least 2015," and that the deal would also include a further $40 million raise for Insomniac. While Insomniac has recently been expanding their focus on mobile and PC titles, the company's flagship franchise Insomniac Games is focused on four pillar titles on the PlayStation 4. These four pillars include the Burnout franchise, the Ratchet & Clank series, and the Sunset Overdrive and SpyParty titles. Many of these would be expected to receive updates over the course of the coming year, however, these updates would be pushed as stand-alone content, and not as part of the core game. Insomniac has also recently expanded their presence in Los Angeles with the new Spaceport LA content, which will be free for Insomniac's flagship titles.----- Forwarded by Andrea Calo/SA/Enron on 11/22/2000 07:53 PM -----
