And they'll kill you. So I won't mention that they're awfully hard to come by in New Hampshire. Or that they're illegal and that people who buy them can go to jail if they're caught carrying them. But I'd like to say, after much deep-thinking and much consideration, I've decided to keep a gun. If I lived in a dictatorship where I needed a permit to travel out of the country, a permit to possess a computer or a piano or a television, a permit to speak to another human being, or a permit to speak to a newborn, I'd probably be tempted to keep my mouth shut about those things. And no one would ever know what I did or didn't have in my possession. But in a democracy, where people can be kept in prison simply for being gay, where the reality is a little bleaker, I'm not so sure I want to suppress a democratic right. First of all, I don't have the freedom to own or to carry a gun, even if it were legal. I am only able to possess a
