In the books, we see the Dementors coming for Harry soon after he becomes acquainted with Nagini. In Harry Potter and the Half-Blood Prince, he sees a Dementor in the parade grounds. There is a similar scene in Harry Potter and the Deathly Hallows where Harry sees a Dementor in the Walrus and the Carpenter scene. It is not fully established in the books why Harry is calling Voldemort Dementor-san. What can we infer from Pottermore article about how Voldemort feels about this scene? A: While Harry doesn't state what he means with this, it seems obvious that it is either a mocking imitation of the common name for Voldemort that he learned in Nagini's case, or a simple combination of the name and the title of the scene (in the former case, this would be 'Dementor-san', in the latter it would be 'Deathly Hallows'). In Chapter 17, 'The Bribe', where he talks to Hagrid for the first time, he states that Voldemort is in no way the devil and that he was not 'born evil'. It is not until some time later that it is hinted that there may be a reason why Voldemort was so opposed to Harry's entry into the wizarding world and it is insinuated that he fears a return of the "Dark Lord". By then, it seems that the "Dark Lord" is a purely negative notion to him, due to the fact that he is not even evil, and that he does not 'rise' at night as there is no one left alive to hear him and thus no one who would recognise him even if he was evil.
