Photoshop isn't the only tool that can take your photos and make them look like works of art. Here are some of the best free online tools for manipulating photos that you can use right now, from a basic desktop program like Picnik to powerful photo editing software like GIMP. Picnik This tool is great for the beginning Photoshop user. I use this free online image editing tool to create quick edits and posters, then I take them to a designer to make them look professional. In addition to its simple editing tools, Picnik offers two expert quality editing tools: "Layers" and "Smart Fix," which allow you to combine multiple photos, put together time-lapses, and even create simple collages. Picnik is based on an Android platform and currently supports the majority of web-based browsers, including Firefox, Chrome, Safari, and Internet Explorer. As an added bonus, you can upload your online creations to Picnik's online gallery and then save it to your Picnik accounts library. Google + Photos In case you didn't know, Google has its own online photo editing tool, Google + Photos. It allows you to make basic edits and effects right from the web or Google+ app and share the result with all your Google+ friends. The site also lets you contribute photos to a folder for your friends to collaborate on. With a growing online community, you could create a special photobucket-style album and share it with the community. GIMP If you want to try the best free online image editing software, give GIMP (GNU Image Manipulation Program) a try. This powerful program supports features including layers, filters, painting tools, text, and even exporting your photos for printing. The basic software is easy to use, but don't worry if you find it a bit intimidating when you first click it up. There are so many tutorials available on the web that make the program's use simple and easy to understand. This program is available for Linux and Windows, and you can run it without any downloads or install. However, if you want to run it in the cloud, you'll need to use a virtual machine. Picnik and Google + Photos are a great way to get started with free online photo editing. If you're looking for a more powerful program, then you'll want to check out GIMP or some of the other alternatives.

The following are some photos I made with Elements 13. I began with a solid black background and then added a monochrome photo of a waterfall. The black was almost completely saturated with a large sunburst pattern. I then added a few color swatches which I used to start adding texture and details. For the additions of color and shading, I turned off the monochrome option. I also added several layers in order to deepen the edges of the sunburst pattern. I made sure to keep the fill of my image lighter than the fill of the layer so the layer would show through it. I also changed the blend mode to Linear Dodge so that I could get the effects I wanted. This tutorial will teach you how to create a number of effects by hand without the use of any animation or Auto-Blend options. It is important to note that these effects will only work on images of file sizes under 16MP and file sizes over 16MP need additional post-processing in order to be worth showing. Here is a visual of the steps I used: Step 1: Create the Sunburst Pattern First, open Photoshop Elements. Launch Elements and open an image of your choice. Under the Artistic Tools: Pattern, create a sunburst radial pattern. Set the width and height to something between 1600 and 1700 with no gaps between the sections. Make sure to use a continuous fill. Now, go to Effect > Distort & Transform > Inflate. You can use the Transform sliders by the top right corner of the window to change the amount of inflation. It's important to note that if you have the "Automatically blend layer with the background" option turned on, you will not be able to see the full effect of the distortion. Click OK to make these changes. Step 2: Add Texture Open another image and add another pattern under Artistic Tools: Pattern. While the artboard is still selected, go to Effect > Texture. Now you'll start to notice that this is a very different, and in my opinion, far more effective way to add textures to your photos. You'll notice that as you add textures, they will become embedded into the artboard as different pattern effects. You can change the color of the pattern by using one of the color swatches at the bottom left of the window. You can also resize the textured pattern as needed. It's important to note that a681f4349e

Q: Run Class from Specific Module I have a project set up as below with multiple modules and their own class modules (i.e. Sales class in the Sales module) Controllers Controllers\SalesController Controllers\OrdersController Modules Module\Sales Module\Orders Module\Sales\SalesController Module\Sales\OrdersController Class Class\Sales Class\Orders The problem is the SalesController is only available in the Sales module and OrdersController only exists within the Orders module, and the Sales module should have access to these controllers. A: I have just noticed, if you have the AppController in the default module, there is no need to create Controller, FileExistsException, seems like. WE ARE OVER TENT AND OUT OF TENTS. What's New In?

Google Fiber, the company set to start service this year, is expanding into new markets. Today Google Fiber announced that it's launching in Austin, Texas. The company says it's bringing "fiber connectivity" to Austin, and will bring speeds of gigabit speeds. That's fast speeds. Fiber currently tops out at 1 gigabit per second, and most standard plans top out at 100 gigabits per second. Google Fiber says it will be delivering those speeds in the city, bringing gigabit speeds to residents for the first time. Google Fiber isn't building new networks, it's working with existing ones. Fiber currently has connections in about seven markets: Kansas City, Missouri; Charlotte, North Carolina; Provo, Utah; Austin; and three California cities: San Francisco, San Jose, and Los Angeles. What is Google Fiber? Google Fiber is a service meant to compete with a service called cable and phone service from, say, Comcast. It offers a year of free service to new customers. It caps prices for those who sign up on a plan for five years, and to say nothing of those who sign up for multiple years and are willing to pay what the service will eventually cost. It cuts back on the number of people who can use the service per area based on a certain number of subscribers. Earlier this year, the company announced plans to roll out the service in Kansas City, providing connections to 10,000 homes in that city, and cutting back on those speeds based on customer load. It's also offering connections to University of Kansas. Google Fiber has a reputation for its last-minute service delay announcements, and it seems that with more expansion, that's going to continue. Earlier this month, the company said it had delayed its launch for the New Orleans area, pushing back its plans to work with Orleans Parish by three months. The company says it's going to be rolling out the service in phases across the US. It says Google Fiber is available for Austin now, and it has already launched in Austin with plans for an additional 20 neighborhoods across the city. Why is Google Fiber important? Google Fiber is certainly a bold move. It's not even a new service; it's just an upgraded service that's already available in other cities and towns. Google Fiber is also facing some competition from other cable companies that are
