Formation of an ionic liquid from nitrobenzene derivative. In this study, we report a facile formation of a novel ionic liquid from a nitrobenzene derivative 1-methyl-5-nitro-1H-pyrrole-2-carbaldehyde (L1). The investigation on the reaction of L1 with various alkyl halides showed that L1 could participate in the formation of the corresponding ionic liquid by the direct reaction between L1 and the alkyl halides. Q: How do I unpack a large data from array in python? I have a file with around 50,000 lines of data in it. Each line of the file is formatted as: item1_name, item1_value, item1_desc, item2_name, item2_value, item2_desc, item3_name, item3_value, item3_desc For this case I have added three items. What I want to do is unpack it so that it becomes: item1, item1_value, item1_desc, item2, item2_value, item2_desc, item3, item3_value, item3_desc Where each item is of type string or whatever and I wish to create a new list with the name of each item (item1, item2, item3) followed by their values (item1_value, item2_value, item3_value). What is the simplest way to go about this task? A: you can use `itertools.groupby()` for this `import itertools with open('data.txt') as f: for k,v in itertools.groupby(f): print k.strip(),'->',v` DEMO We would like to pass along two pieces of excellent news. The first is that we will be participating in the May 2, 2000 Texas-Based Internet Auction, hosted by Largent Auction. The auction will be held via the Internet, and we are looking forward to this exciting opportunity. The second piece of good news is that Enron Credit has taken over the marketing of the Enron Corp. business in Japan. We are in the process of establishing many new contacts

What's New in the Adobe Photoshop CS5?

Q: Exchange Server 2007 conversion to Exchange 2010 FCM I am trying to get my Exchange 2007 installation upgraded to Exchange 2010 FCM. I have already done the most time consuming part of the process, the migration. The install has completed, and I am using a guide to do the rest. I am running into a few bumps in the road. The first is that it appears that I now need to be a part of the SrvGroup. I have attempted to go to Servers in Add/Remove and Add myself to the Servers that I need to. I click OK on the Servers page, and then on the Servers tab in my Organization Configuration. The name of the root server is correct, but there is not Server(s) under Servers (which of course I don't need). My second issue is that I can't seem to find the WSUS server from the add/remove sites I'm trying to add. I have found the second DNS name of it, but, according to my guide, that is incorrect. How can I find the correct name of the WSUS server? This one's a bit of a stumper. The third issue is that the wizard to upgrade doesn't show me anything but the old Exchange 2007 server when I click New Server, which would be fine except I can't seem to figure out how to actually upgrade the old server. I'm sure that there are some major steps in there that I am missing and could really use some help with. I feel sure that I am missing the WSUS server in the Set Servers section, but don't know how to get it there. A: You can't add servers in the Organization Configuration without being in the domain. I am not sure that is a concern but in this situation I'd move it to another machine. As for the Servers / WSUS section, you probably just went to "Server Installation" and clicked "New Server". This created a new server without configuring it in the wizard for you. Right-click on the server in the left pane and select "Upgrade to Exchange Server 2010". "When our docs tell us it was torn, we have to say yes because then we'll be on the hook for something we didn't know about and couldn't have known about," said Alexandra Camilla Enright
