Who knows who you are. You could be a little kid. You could be a very famous. You can do all sorts of things. So the Internet is a very dangerous, because it's anonymous and you don't really know who you're dealing with. There is no way to verify who you are," said a lawyer who specialises in cybercrime. He said that a tricky thing is so many people are getting involved with cybercrime these days because when it comes to money, these criminals are all over the place. According to CyberScout, the general population in Kenya has been involved with cybercrime in some way or the other. The organization says that 30 per cent of the respondents have faced cyber fraud and another 20 per cent have lost money in the cybercrime arena, while 18 per cent have been scammed by someone. However, the lawyer said the reason cyber fraud is so pervasive, is that cyber criminals can hide behind an anonymous profile online. "The Internet is full of criminals and we never know which one of them is bad or good. The anonymity and the lack of reality behind the Internet makes it very easy for cyber criminals to operate in a space that is so low-risk and threatening, because there is no way to verify your identity. But on the Internet, anyone can do anything," he said. The cybercrime lawyer noted that those involved with cybercrime should be careful about their information because once a scammer has your
