Image editing programs are almost always much more versatile than they are straightforward. For example, many image-editing programs offer a multitude of adjustment layers, which are a very powerful way to make tweaking quick and easy. If you're a graphics designer you should know how to use these adjustment layers, but you may not be aware of how incredibly versatile they are. Many other tools that you won't use in-depth on a day-to-day basis are probably much more powerful than you realize. The online Adobe Photoshop help manual is available at ` You can create one of your own logo designs by using the logo design templates that Adobe provides for you at ` The Graphics Studio template has a family of clip art with some logos and common artwork you can use as base elements. Try it out and create some stock graphics to help with your projects. # Creating a Vector Clip Art File in Illustrator Adobe Illustrator can work as your vector image editor. You can create logos, banners, and more from your screen, drag them into your document, customize their appearance, and save them as files to use as clip art. All the things you can do in Photoshop can be done in Illustrator too, but it tends to offer more design-oriented features. However, it also offers excellent vector drawing tools and vector-based features with high-quality output. You can even create 3-D vector images by using the Fusion programs that Adobe has recently introduced. Illustrator's vector features are well-documented, and you can find many tools to help in the Help system. If you're looking to create clip art for a client, it's a good program to use. ## Preparing Your Image Clipping is one of the most powerful features Illustrator has to offer. It's a feature that Photoshop doesn't have, but it's not as powerful as it could be. If you're working with someone else's artwork or if you're using the well-thought-out Clip Art Library templates in the Graphics Studio, then you don't need to pay any closer attention to the file before you perform a paste. But if you're creating your own artwork, you can use the paste command as an editing tool. You can

Dunkin' Donuts, the world's largest coffee and doughnuts franchise, is adding the Museum of Modern Art (MoMA) to its growing collection of 1,000 locations. The franchises will not only sell MoMA's offerings but will also donate a portion of their revenue to the non-profit institution. The initiative is part of MoMA's Continue Culture program, which aims to increase museum attendance and deepen public understanding of the arts by donating 15 percent of the licensing fees from the sale of beverages and food to the museum. A recent survey found that 25 percent of U.S. millennials visit museums more often because of pricing, ease of acquisition, and speed of entry. The MoMA DDD kiosks will set up shop for two hours on weekends this summer, starting with The Bronx, where MoMA's West and East buildings are located. This is the third location opened in the last year. MoMA opened their first overseas store in the U.K. in June and a pop-up store at the Brooklyn Academy of Music in April. There will also be a sixth location in The Bronx, which will open its doors on July 13. Two new stores in Manhattan and Brooklyn will open in the coming weeks. The coffee and doughnut shops will serve MoMA's "Talks" series, an online initiative that curates short-form talks through MoMA Talks, MoMA ArtLab, MoMA Talks on Film, and MoMA Talks on Arts and Activism. MoMA has also partnered with W Hotels and Wynn Resorts to introduce new offerings, including Harnett's Rum Monkeys at the Wynn Encore and MoMa Donuts at the Wynn. MoMA launched the new kiosks in the U.S. in March and in the U.K. in June.Q: Java inner class catch and rethrow exception I have a situation where I need to create nested classes that are inner to a superclass. I would like to catch exception that the inner classes throw and rethrow it in the superclass so the outer class can handle it correctly. For example, say I have the following: public class Client { public void request(Context context) { Server server = new Server(context); DoDo()
