New York Mets catching prospect Travis d'Arnaud has been placed on the disabled list with a hamstring injury. D'Arnaud, 22, hurt himself running the bases last Wednesday, a day after hitting his third home run of the season. He missed three games, then returned to pinch hit in Wednesday's game against the Atlanta Braves. "He's always been real diligent about his body, and he's had several injuries, not just the hamstring," manager Terry Collins said before the game. "I've seen him run, and you can tell he's in discomfort. So, we just thought it would be best to step him back a little bit." D'Arnaud was hitting .317 with seven home runs and 41 RBIs. His 11 stolen bases tied for third in the National League. The injury comes on the heels of a month in which he missed time with an oblique strain, and it is still unclear when he will return to the lineup. D'Arnaud, the Mets' No. 8 prospect, started at catcher for the first time this season Sunday and hit a home run in a 15-3 loss to the Milwaukee
