His work in music and art forms has extended beyond the basic categories of the clinical setting to take in the more distant and philosophical areas of philosophy and theology. He is also a keen travel and photography enthusiast, so these interests have been brought together in his latest series 'Silence'. In his 'Silence' series, the artist shows his own insights into people and his own thoughts on those people. He draws them as they are but puts them in a different position than they would be normally. They are not aware of the art that he is creating around them. The portraits he has drawn are expressive but very calm and serene. "As a musician, I have always been intrigued by the idea of absolute silence, and what it would be like to live in such a world. I also have been concerned about the ways in which silence is oppressed in many societies and how our capacity for hearing is constantly compromised, to the point of near oblivion, to maintain the status quo", Ben Coates. 'Silence' was originally meant to be created by Coates alone, but the Manchester University hospital's care system was quick to perceive the potential for transforming the whole project into a gift for others.
