JASF: Jane's Advanced Strike Fighters is an arcade flight simulator based on the SimFlight engine and released by JASF. The development was funded with $3,000,000,000. Jane's Advanced Strike Fighters is an aviation simulation video game developed by JASF and released in 2003. Jane's Advanced Strike Fighters uses the Unreal Engine game engine. Jane's Advanced Strike Fighters includes different classes of aircraft, including: planes, helicopters and missiles, and many missions. The game features a variety of helicopter classes including: attack helicopters, transport helicopters, and support helicopters. Each class has a number of missions and quests. There are also many different types of aircraft, including: fighters and bombers. If there is a new feature in the game, the corresponding menu appears. In general, all controls are as similar as possible to those in any other aviation-themed game. There are also more advanced types of aircraft, such as F/A-18C Hornet, F-22, F-35, F-15, F-16, F-117, F-18, Mirage 2000 and Typhoon. The game has no interface at all. And at the very beginning of the game you are given a choice: to fly a fighter or a bomber. During the missions you will perform tasks such as: 1. Landing troops. 2. Destroying an enemy airfield. 3. Eliminating enemy anti-aircraft units on the radar. 4. Destruction of enemy anti-aircraft units and radar on radar. 5. Destruction of enemy radar. 6. Destroying enemy radar on radar. 7.
