These tags don't have any logic, they're just metadata, and I can . This can be a very efficient way to load balance across all of my agents. (Also a very good way to avoid using two separate lists. This may result in one of them not being able to serve everyone). So basically I want all my agents to be configured such that the agent is always considered the fastest one so that it can be started if it is available and can be started if it is not available. Is there a way to achieve this with an API like I described above? Or is there an even more elegant way?
