How can I do it? Thanks A: This is not a great way to get it, but you can do it. The below assumes that you already have an if statement checking if the screen size (in inches) is greater than a certain limit. bool isLandscape = (Screen.PrimaryScreen.Bounds.Width > Screen.PrimaryScreen.Bounds.Height); A: I want to detect the orientation of a device and not the orientation of a user. How can I do it? You cannot. User's may rotate their device, the orientation might be changed by the user. You should detect the screen resolution, and calculate the angle accordingly. A better approach would be to detect the position of a device, and handle the rotation situation yourself. Review of platinum complexes in anticancer therapy. The development of new platinum analogues with better water solubility and specific mechanisms of action has improved the clinical efficacy of these agents. Four of the newer platinum complexes have been approved for use in the United States and are in active clinical use: (1) cisplatin and carboplatin, which cross-link purine bases and therefore affect both normal and malignant cells to some degree; (2) oxaliplatin, which inter 570a42141b
