But, other than that this is definitely a must-have shirt for any man. Thanks 5.11!

An experimental study in oil field production facilities with a two-phase flow model. An experimental study of non-Newtonian oil drop formation was carried out in the context of oil production with a two-phase flow model. A turbulent model was considered within the framework of a Boussinesq laminar flow model. The experimental data show that a clear-cut segregation mechanism of oil and water occurs between the slug flow and gravity-driven phases. In particular, the experimental findings show that in the case of an intermediate Elisa number (between 0.15 and 0.3), the dynamics of drop formation are significantly influenced by the presence of near-wall turbulence as fluid mass-transfer occurs at the interface. In the case of a high Elisa number (higher than 0.3), the drop formation phenomenon is governed by gravity.
