Just like 0000005. How could I achieve this? I tried: var x = "0000005"; var d = int.Parse(x); d += 0; but I get "5". That makes sense, but how do I convert a string into a number with leading 0's? A: You can use the format string for doing this. string s = "0000005"; int i = int.Parse(s, System.Globalization.NumberStyles.HexNumber, System.Globalization.NumberFormatInfo.InvariantInfo); // i == 5 You can also use the ToString and ToInt32 methods. int i = 0; int.TryParse("0000005", out i); // i == 5 And if you know for sure that there will always be a 0 then: int i = -1; string s = "0000005"; int.TryParse(s, NumberStyles.HexNumber, CultureInfo.InvariantCulture, out i); A: If you know that the number is always 0-padded, you can use.PadLeft: string x = "0000005"

Do the right thing. Good morning, Chief. Halo Reach PC Download Game. Halo Reach PC. Halo Reach PC. Halo Reach PC is an action-packed first-person shooter, and it's the second chapter in the Halo Saga. When the Covenant invaded earth, Master Chief and his fellow Spartans stopped them. Xbox 360 Halo Reach PC WAAAYYYYYYY late, but I totally heard Halo Reach was gonna be an Xbox live exclusive. I mean, my boyfriend and I got together over Halo Reach. He was all like, "I just want to talk to Cortana, so I can make things right" and I was all like "I know exactly what you should do, so we just need to get this game." I was even more psyched when the Halo Reach PC FREE GAME came out for PC, cause I love that they made it available for Xbox live. It's a bit different from the first Halo, because the relationship with the "Powers that Be" (People Who Know) Cortana changed. Now she sees everything, and she's built into the armor. That's why she has to live in you. It's also got that element where you're shooting people and usually they get shot off a cliff or in the water or in a building so it's not like you're "inside a tank" it's like "you're not a 570a42141b
