As a homage to his namesake, 007 added a bit of flair by creating the KJ-series of vehicles. Some of the Bond cars had snazzy names like the "QV-3" and even the "Bond Stealth." A few years ago, Ford and Volvo created a joint venture. Together, they made a beautiful car that would honor 007 for one last time before his untimely demise. The Volvo KJ-3A. The car has a unique story. The fact that it was created with the aid of Volvo's J-series is somewhat strange. The J-series was aimed at luxury cars. It had five seats, five doors, and a two-seater. This car was designed to be a sexy, classy, stealthy people carrier. At the time of its debut, the KJ-3A was generally viewed as just another European entry. The Volvo was made to be similar to the Kia, which at the time was a Toyota. In terms of looks, the car should have been a smashing success. It was sleek and sexy. It was about as sexy as a Volvo should be, and was once heralded as a worthy successor to the XC90 T5. In fact, the KJ-3A was so sexy, Ford planned to place a teaser ad for the car on the back of a 2006 Mustang. Sadly, the KJ-3A never saw the light of day. Engine and Performance The KJ-3A used Volvo's lovely SPA as the basis for its powerplant. This engine produced 178 HP and 130 lb-ft of torque. This engine was later used in the Volvo V60, XC60, and S60, and was also used in the Volvo XC90 T6. Drivetrain The KJ-3

Police are investigating whether a train driver has been held at knife-point in the Moray area. Officers were alerted to the incident at around 6.30am on Sunday morning. It happened in the village of Drochaid - near Grantown on Spey. A Scotland Yard spokesman said: "Police were called by a member of the public to reports of a man with a knife at the railway station in Moray. No-one was injured." The force has previously warned train drivers in Aberdeen to be on the lookout for people armed with knives who have been watching railway stations.1.
