Take the classic "Yo Mama" jokes and throw them into your desktop! *Edit* The author of this script has stated that this script could not stand up to the requirements of Apple's Mac OS 7.6.5. I would like to thank the author of this script for the script and all of the suggestions I have received. I do not wish to take credit for a script that is flawed. Yo Mama This is an implementation of the original table to display the fabled Yo Mama joke table. However, like the original, I have the table run off the screen and left a tiny box in the corner for scrolling. Also, on the right side of the table is a little entry box for the entering of the words that are desired. There are five modes: 1) It can just run and fill the screen with the original (first) table. 2) It can be setup to scroll down to the bottom and re-set the size of the table so that the bottom of the table is on the bottom of the screen, the screen size is smaller, and the words for which "Yo Mama" is currently set are displayed. 3) This can be set to scroll down to the bottom and re-set the size of the table so that the bottom of the table is on the bottom of the screen, the screen size is smaller, and the words for which "Yo Mama" is currently set are displayed. When you exit the game (in this case the bottom of the table is on the bottom of the screen and the game exits to the desktop), this version is saved in a history file and the same setting is used the next time you start. 4) This can be set to scroll down to the bottom and re-set the size of the table so that the bottom of the table is on the bottom of the screen, the screen size is smaller, and the words for which "Yo Mama" is currently set are displayed. Explorer (Windows XP or higher): you can now activate the Yahoo! Widget on your homepage with any other online search engine.

Freedom of speech is often abused by people who want to exclude anything they disagree with from a web page. Adobe (and many others) tried to license the software for users who want to put a blank space on their web site without forcing the user to go through a legal process and pay a fee. In the end, the situation has become more complicated and the restriction of people who want to say something controversial without interference by a handful of people is difficult to manage. The web is a wonderful way to share and express all kinds of different ideas. The same thing applies to software as well. Some people develop software to exercise their Freedom of Speech. Most software is just not like that but some of it can get away with it. This software enables you to create applications that work exactly as you wish and cannot be shut down or modified in any way. This makes it completely different from other software. This software can also be used for free by anyone who wants to exercise their Freedom of Speech on your desktop. Ever wondered why your cursor always lags behind your mouse? Then it is time to get a high performance mouse like the Voodoo2 Pro. The ability to configure every part of this mouse to your liking can take a little time and is a little tricky. However, once you have done it you will have a mouse that is far superior to any other mouse in its price range. I personally use it with a natural pointer, but you can use it with any configuration. The only downside to this mouse is that it does not come with a warranty. There is a limited warranty though, for a cost, if you are lucky enough to have one with it. Notch.dll is used to create a 'notch' at the bottom of a window. The notches in the windows will eventually disappear if you get enough notches on the windows. You can get even more notches if you run it more than once. A
