The present invention relates to a control apparatus for a high-pressure discharge lamp for controlling an inverter circuit for driving a discharge lamp, and a method of controlling such control apparatus. In such a high-pressure discharge lamp, a first frequency of an inverter circuit is usually at 10 to 20 kHz and a second frequency at about 20 to 30 kHz, and the first frequency and the second frequency are not equal. In a low-frequency driving, the amount of power is increased to shorten the turn-on time. On the other hand, in a high-frequency driving, the amount of power is decreased to improve efficiency. In this respect, there is a tendency to increase the amount of power with the increase of the first frequency. In a high-pressure discharge lamp used as a luminous flux of a liquid crystal projector, a large amount of power is required, and it is important that the lamp is driven at a constant amount of power. Especially in a non-self-fluorescent type high-pressure discharge lamp, a light source having a short lighting time is required. In the non-self-fluorescent lamp, however, when the amount of power is increased as described above, the amount of power is not decreased as the lighting time is shortened, and the amount of power is sometimes not decreased for a predetermined lighting time. In addition, when a liquid crystal panel having a limited range of lighting is used, for example, a liquid crystal projector using a liquid crystal panel of such type is recently developed. According to this arrangement, in order to minimize the size of the liquid crystal panel, it is required to minimize the amount of light and increase the amount of power to be controlled. However, when the amount of power is increased as described above, a load of the inverter circuit is increased. Accordingly, there is a limit in increasing the amount of power to be supplied to the lamp. In addition, in a high-pressure discharge lamp containing mercury, a starting voltage is higher and the amount of power for starting is also large. Accordingly, the electrical power is not accurately supplied to the lamp in a short time. In order to prevent a variation in the amount of power, a function for preventing the variation in the amount of power has been provided in an inverter circuit. In this connection, a control of the inverter circuit by a microcomputer has been proposed. For example, in the Japanese Unexamined Patent Publication No. 8-157763, an inverter circuit

Presented is the earliest reported case of interstitial laser coagulation of a true posterior urethral diverticulum, an extremely rare entity, in which the patient was successfully treated. The patient had been previously treated with a prostatic urethral lift cystourethroplasty but developed recurrent posterior urethral diverticula. A transurethral 532-nm Nd:YAG laser was used. The technique allowed local tissue necrosis with preservation of the
