FIFA (from Electronic Arts and their FIFA Soccer series) is a 3D football/soccer game that has sold in excess of 80 million units since its inception as a videogame in the 1980s. FIFA was the inspiration for the many sports games that have followed it since. By installing its own layer of abstraction on top of the videogame engine, in case of the new FIFA, this layer of abstraction is called FIFA™. What version will I get? You should have received an email from the store with the version that you should download. What are the differences between the three versions? There are no significant differences between the versions. The only difference we can tell you for sure is the version you play (1.08 or 1.10) When will the game be released? We will update this page as soon as possible, with the official release date. Why is the price so high? The price of this game is always inflated by its retail value in the first place. This is why we would prefer to sell this game for a price below its retail value. What is FIFA™? A layer of abstraction that allows us to have different games with the same goals, the same rules, different settings and even different teams in these games. How will the game match in real life (on the pitch)? The game and the simulation engine take into account the specificities of the sport (rulings, kinds of attacks, ball animations, goalie behaviour, etc.) to produce the game closest to the real reality. What are the technical features of FIFA™? How do I choose my player? In FIFA, you can have one or more team of players. The number of teams is the same as the number of players available in the player inventories of the team. A player is linked to a team. When you create your team, you can choose the 4 following players to play for you: The Main Player A player who is always (or almost always) the main attacking threat in your team. A player who can score a lot of goals. A player who can have a lot of assists for his team (number of touches of the ball before scoring a goal). A defender. Can I change my team? Yes, you can change your team with the same configuration. How does bc9d6d6daa

I am studying the python sets documentation and came across something I don't understand. It says that adding all the elements in a set to a list and looping through it is slower than looping through the elements one by one. However, I am unable to realize why that is. For example, if we consider the following two methods, the first method returns the number of elements in the set and the second method returns the elements of the set as a list. >>> set_1 = set(range(100))
