Looks like the tearful, handwritten, spontaneous phone calls from the left, with their deep feeling for the Obamessiah and their genuine concern for his health, will have some power after all. On the face of it, when thinking of his body, he apparently couldn't bear to have a one-on-one with his own Vice President Joe Biden, so the call got cold. When thinking of his health, he couldn't bear to talk to the man that is most openly guestioning him: his own physician, Dr. Mehmet Oz. And now he couldn't stand the thought of taking a number of selfies with pretty girls in matching outfits. What made Obama's

I want to use asort() function defined in the std::sort module in my code, but I'm unable to find the right library crate (i.e., sort) to do it. As I know, there is a sort crate on crates.io but it doesn't provide gsort function, while I found the latest version of std.sort from github (but it doesn't provide either. What should I do? Thank you! A: The std::sort is just a wrapper around std::gsort which is provided by the std-quicksort crate. Simply add the following to your Cargo.toml: [dependencies] std-quicksort = "0.1.4" Now you can use std::sort inside of your code with std::gsort. It's been a rough month for BitTorrent. This morning, the company announced that it had struck a deal with Warner Bros to add its content to the popular BitTorrent Live service, which has provided users with access to live, multicast Internet streams of TV shows. The service became available just two months ago, but is now facing the prospect of thousands of people downloading pirated movies and shows as users find out that they've been tapped for the service. The problem is that BitTorrent's existing Digital Rights Management system, which was set up last year, is not set up to prevent users from downloading pirated content. For that, BitTorrent would need a license from companies like Warner Bros or Fox, which are part of the Entertainment Industry Association's Digital Rights Management Alliance. According to TorrentFreak, BitTorrent had paid a fee for the rights to use the royalty-free technologies from Universal and Warner Bros, but the license hasn't been released yet. Until that happens, Warner Bros will be the sole source of content on BitTorrent Live, which is much more than a web-based version of the service that was developed by BitTorrent itself 648931e174
