Q: The images of the set of all countable subsets of \mathbb{N} and \mathbb{R} are the same? Let $X = \{ A \subseteq \mathbb{N} : A \text{ is countable} \}$. I'm not sure how to approach this problem. It does seem like the image of the set itself under f is exactly the set X itself, however, I'm not sure how to prove this mathematically. How would I go about proving that these two images are the same set? Or could someone give me a hint to a hint? A: If X is countable, it is \mathbb{N} . So all its elements are countable. Consequently, the codomain of f is countable. That is, we only need to show that the image of X is $\mathcal{P}(X)$. The fact that the codomain is countable, tells you that it cannot be $\mathcal{P}(\mathbb{N})$. So it must be something like $\mathcal{P}(X)$. If you're not familiar with the definition of the power set of a set, here's a hint. Call $\mathcal{P}(X)$ the power set of a set X and if $A \subseteq X$ is countable, write $A \subseteq \mathbb{N}$ to mean that A is countable. Then you should be able to write that any countable $A \subseteq$
