type vehicle-driving posture determination device, which can be used for collision avoidance systems and the like that warn drivers of the side-view risk of colliding with other vehicles. 2. Description of the Related Art Pedestrian protection systems are in use at traffic intersections, and especially at crosswalks. The systems are provided as a measure against vehicular traffic accidents, including collisions, involving walking or other vehicles. Examples of the pedestrian protection systems include pedestrian detection devices that monitor crosswalk zones and calculate the risk of collision with a pedestrian crossing the crosswalk. For example, a detection device uses a CMOS camera or a similar imaging device to extract an area having a high possibility of collision with a pedestrian.

The detection device then detects the direction and distance of the approaching pedestrian, using an image processing technique, and immediately notifies the driver that a collision risk exists. The side view is known as an important element in detecting a pedestrian crossing the crosswalk. The side view is an image of a vehicle seen from its side. That is, the side view is an image of a vehicle from a direction intersecting at a right angle to a longitudinal axis of the vehicle. Château d'Haut-Quincy Château d'Haut-Quincy is a castle in the commune of Ligny-en-Barrois in the département of the Somme, in Picardy, France. It is located at the edge of the Hautequerquin plateau, between the towns of Haut-Quincy and Lesdain. The château has existed since the 15th century, but was destroyed by French troops under Jean de La Tremoille, marshal of France in 1512, during the Battle of the Spurs. Construction was in part funded by the family of Jacques d'Annebaut who was killed fighting there. The château was restored in 1846 and given to the Société pour la préservation des monuments historiques for the purpose of rehabilitating it. Since 1900, the château has been in a state of repair and restoration. The grounds have been largely renovated as well and the museum is open to the public.
