The creekwalk has been referred to as the "Million Dollar Creekwalk" by locals, since a linear feature is alleged to be the only mile of this type of trail within the city limits. City employees including Durango Parks, Recreation, and Trails Director Chris Gullickson, conducted a third of a mile of the trail last week, after the creek had dried up. Since the creek bed is visible, the trail is open, but the city advises caution. Locals say there is a small drop into the creek and two sheer drops off the bank, in the center of the trail. The creekwalk was discovered by a member of the Durango Hiking Club last month, while hiking the Hoyt Hill trail. The hidden creek is located just off the trail, in the large open area near Heartbreak Hill. The footprint did not appear to be seasonal, since there was still water in the creek. City employees were able to stake out the trail and "discover" the creek. During a follow-up visit by the city, on October 6, the trail was found to be 1/3 mile in length. The creek is approximately 10 feet wide and about three feet deep, in some spots, but it is visible to follow for much of its length. A survey of the creek was conducted, today, following the fire department's inspection. Findings include a 16" diameter concrete culvert under the trail, that drains runoff from the surrounding
