Q: Optimizing select query the table I have looks like this

| id | name | client | client_id | status |
|----|------|---------|-----------|---------|
| 1 | test | client1 | 1 | 1 |
| 2 | 1 | 2 | sample | client1 |
| 2 | 2 | 3 | test | client3 |
| 3 | 1 | 1 | 4 | sample |
| 3 | 1 | 2 | | |

----- 1 test client1
2 1 2 sample client1 2 2 3 test client3 1 1 4 sample client3 1 2 I have tried to create a view which selects the data I want however its taking a lot of time to do the select. The data I select is mainly from the tables client and status the view looks like this

select * from ( select c.name, cs.client, cs.status from client c inner join status cs on cs.client_id = c.client where cs.status = 1 order by c.id ) ;

this is the execution plan:

(internal sort not displayed) I want to know what can I do to optimize this query. I know its not the best solution, but its the only way I can get the data in one time and not have to query multiple times. A: So long as you want the latest status per client, it doesn't need to be an order by and it can be inlined. select c.name, cs.client, cs.status from client c inner join status cs on cs.client_id = c.client where cs.status = 1 A: The main issue is that the where clause restricts the rows to be selected from status. In your situation it isn't necessary to restrict the rows, since the rows will be selected anyway. `select c.name, cs.client, cs.status from client c inner join status cs on cs.client_id = c.client where cs.status = 1` What you could improve is the column naming. You may want to use a table for
