Automated design environments created by the CAD/CAM industries have proven their value in enhancing productivity of engineering firms, reducing time-to-market and innovation. However, desktop CAD/CAM systems are not sufficient to meet the diverse needs of an enterprise. The digital revolution has also impacted the design and manufacturing industries, and businesses today require solutions that can deliver. businesses have developed to meet the diverse needs of their business and personal automotive, industrial, consumer and retail industries and are expanding into new product lines such as medical, aerospace and electronics. The increasing complexity of design tasks has led to greater use of BIM (Building Information Modeling) technology to support design and analysis. Designers and engineers are increasingly using the data contained within different applications and data models to make decisions and develop their ideas. The proliferation of user-generated content, social media and mobile devices have further changed the face of design. Architects, engineers, construction and manufacturing firms are becoming more aware of the need to work with information that is distributed and available through the internet. To respond to the changing needs of business and society, companies are increasingly looking beyond the desktop for the technologies needed for design, production, marketing and innovation. Web-based applications are inexpensive, easy to implement and allow users to work in multiple platforms. In the same manner, users can run the same application in the cloud on demand, at a fraction of the cost.. Mobile technology is used for design reviews, travel and driving directions, to access and update data such as floor plans and manuals. It is also used to address workforce issues, such as distribution of equipment and information. The internet has created a new platform for CAD professionals, providing us with the ability to share knowledge, experience and resources with colleagues around the world. It is also providing new ways to collaborate, share information,. Below is a list of the top 10 manufacturing CAD/CAM software companies, as well as. Here we list the top 10 CAD/CAM tools. we use many different CAD/CAM tools d0c515b9f4

was generated by autocad) Q: Objective C objects get reinitialized on every entry I have a fairly complex Objective C class in which I create some objects, store them in an NSMutableArray, and release them on dealloc. Everytime I dealloc, the objects get re-initialized (every single one of them), and I can see that in the Instruments Allocations tool. The objects are not being released, the count of the NSMutableArray stays exactly the same. I have tried to find this in Google/SO, but nothing seems to work... All objects are of the same type, and no subclassing is involved. Anybody knows what the problem might be? Thanks in advance. Cheers, MP. Edit: The code: @interface XMLElement : NSObject @property (nonatomic) BOOL normal; @property (nonatomic) BOOL comment; +(NSMutableArray*) getMutableElementsFromXMLElement:(XMLElement*)element; -(void) setNormal:(BOOL)normal; -(void) setComment:(BOOL)comment; @end @implementation XMLElement -(void) dealloc { _normal = NO;
