Q: React useState value changes but don't render (function components) I have a strange issue in my react function component. I have added some code below that does not seem to work. The state change correctly but the render() function does not update, also I have other react functional component in the project that are same as this one and that works perfectly. This is code without hooks: `import React from'react'; export default class Welcome extends React.Component { constructor(props) { super(props); this.state = { value: "1" }; } myFunction = () => { this.setState({ value: this.state.value + 1 }); } render() { if (this.state.value === 1) { return value is 1; } return ( {this.state.value} ); } }` If I use the code below it will not work, it will render the correct value of 2 in the div that is not there: `import React from'react'; export default class Welcome extends React.Component { constructor(props) { super(props); this.state = { value: "1" }; }`

System Requirements: Windows 7, Windows 8, Windows 10, Windows 10 Mobile, Windows 8.1, Windows Server 2016, Windows Server 2012 4.0 out of 5 stars Audio Editors Programs May 8, 2016 Overall: Performance: Appearance: Functionality: Review: Since I've had an iPod for a couple of years, I've used several MP3 players (including Windows) and a handful of MP3 editors. Over the years I've been impressed by the convenience offered by the various MP3 editors. I didn't have to download another MP3 player or MP3 editor to be able to listen to music on my iPod. This wonderful program is an all-in-one solution for editing an MP3, covering everything you need: you don't have to download a player and an editor. You simply drag files, tracks, playlists, and playlists (including Batch Playlists) directly into the player. A nice feature is that the program provides assistance to find files quickly. Once you drag a file into the player, it is shown in the list, with its name, title, song length, artist, album and year. You can even click the artist to see the list of artists sorted by year. AudioTrack PRO supports a wide variety of formats and it features a few specific functions such as YouTube support, multi-language support and support for professional hi-res sampling. You can add tracks to a new or existing playlist or replace a playlist's tracks. AudioTrack PRO also features a playlist manager, which supports both Batch Playlists and custom playlists for a wide variety of tasks such as creating a mix, creating a tracklist, creating a playlist from your current song selection, etc. AudioTrack PRO is easy to navigate, with a pretty intuitive layout that you can share across folders. It is not especially fast, but handles quickly. If you're not in a hurry, the program can even be set to show only once when you open it. I found several additional useful features such as a track editor with audio preview, which displays the audio waveform, a sample rate converter, a clean interface, a format converter, etc. This version of the program has a cleaner interface. After dragging a file or a selection of files into a playlist, there is a small menu for opening the playlist, adding the selection, renaming the playlist, moving the selection to another playlist
