BUY NOW Real Teams, All-Stars – Be there in the stadiums where history is made and gameplay takes place with real players and real coaches from the real leagues of the world. Start by creating a custom team from more than 60 national teams and compete against them in a real-world tour and compare yourself against the world's greatest players. The second version of this mode, "Real Teams, Real Players," is due to be launched in March 2020. Not bad at all. Not as bad as I thought it would be. Taking out some of the dumb decisions FIFA made (I missed a long ball on the goal) and made sure the very basic things the game needs to work were consistent. No weird gameplay when switching to a sub. No weird AI when changing formations. No randomness when switching formation. It's not rocket science. FIFA doesn't have to be perfect, but they have to start with simple things and work their way up. EDIT Also edited the last paragraph to include the new mode. You still can't play or even touch the ball for 20 minutes after you have the ball. This has to be one of the dumbest things I've seen in gaming. Another thing, the "quirky" broadcasters we've seen in FIFA over the years are replaced with some terrible bland people who just talk in long drawn out boring sentences. My game is stuck at the following: I can't unlock KDB's new gloves... Can't even change formation... HUD won't show a players name... My Clubs are stuck on an island with their previous kits (no customizing) How you guys can say that this game is good.... After 3 patches it's finally up to release... It's almost like the developers are trying to tell us that its so good with us not knowing that they are the ones making the patches. There are things that we still need to hear about the game but those who are waiting for an Early Access... can't be mad at what the EA has to offer. Sounds like Madden to me. Although that is a feature I could use, you can never sell the game on the EA store as it is full of Madden and P
