Bombardier Delivers TST-1S September 8, 2017: Bombardier Aerospace has delivered the first TST-1S for the customer in the U.S. The airplane will be used as a member of the TST consortium, which will eventually comprise 10 TST-1S airplanes. The TST-1S is an upgraded version of Bombardier's successful TST-1, allowing the Cessna Citation Mustang aircraft to operate more efficiently and safely. It is configured with a new three-shaft turbine and revised propeller. Delivered to the customer, Renton Technologies, the TST-1S will be delivered to other members of the consortium over the next 12 months. The TST consortium was established in 2014 to replace Bombardier's Airlander Airship, which completed its first flight in July 2017. The TST-1S builds on the successful TST-1, which began operating in July 2015. The TST-1S is a best-in-class turboprop airplane with a range of more than 4,000 nautical miles and customer-preferred duty cycles between 25% to 50% flying time. "The new TST-1S marks a significant step forward in the evolution of our customers' turboprop business," said John Pearson, president, Bombardier Business Aircraft. "By introducing the new model into the TST marketplace, we enable our customer to operate its own aircraft and gain operational and financial efficiencies without surrendering the turboprop advantages." The TST-1S will enter service with Bombardier Aerospace's TST-Group program to operate from U.S. airports. H.T. Hankey, President, GKN Global, said: "Our working relationship with Bombardier is an excellent example of the most efficient arrangement of this type. We wanted to become operational with a Boeing 747-400 but the collaboration with Bombardier enabled us to achieve it on time." V.W. Chow, Managing Director, GKN Aviation, said: "Our partnership
