Ryuji Kimura, President of Konami Digital Entertainment said, "The FIFA team could not be more excited to deliver the most complete and dynamic game of FIFA ever. Our goal was always to deliver a football experience that makes us feel closer to the game and that's why we teamed up with our partners EA Sports to re-envision how players train, watch, and play the beautiful game." In this video, we explain what "HyperMotion Technology" means to FIFA 22. If you are an iPhone user, you can find this video on YouTube here. FIFA 20 introduced "Real Player Motion", which captures real life player actions, in-game animations and in-game player models during gameplay. FIFA 18 introduced "Easier Player Control", where the game got rid of the under-managed by the game system, and was optimized from the inside-out. FIFA 20 introduced the "Prediction System", where the game was preprogrammed to predict future player behaviour and re-organise its gameplay. FIFA 16 introduced "Fusion", which allowed 2 or 4 players to "team up" to play as a single player. FIFA 17 introduced "Funny Faces", which allows the player to view the on-field emotions of the player he is attacking. FIFA 16 introduced "Assistant mode", which allows users to play as a Player Agent, be available as an ai during gameplay, and give recommendations based on user's affinity towards the game. FIFA 19 introduced the "In-Game Studio", which allows users to create their own player with the help of their friends, upload their on-field identities and other players' names to create their own player identity. FIFA 14 introduced "The Journey Mode" to allow players to experience the game from the start to the goal with their own created player to play for. This is just the beginning. Can you come up with more of the same? Let us know in the comments below./*

FIFA is a football video game series that has sold over 120 million copies worldwide and become the most successful sports video game franchise in the history of gaming. First developed by EA Canada, FIFA was first released in September of 1994 for the Sega Mega Drive (Genesis) console. The game was created by a small group of developers in Playahouse at EA Canada's head office in Burnaby, BC. The game has been published worldwide by EA Sports since its original release in North America. EA Sports later took over the publishing rights of the game. The original goal of the game was to take the football experience beyond on-pitch action and into the multi-million dollar live football market. EA was able to commercialize FIFA with the licensing of all soccer teams and leagues, broadcast and media rights, plus the in-depth license of all player contracts. Because of these licenses, every year since 2001 FIFA has been the most successful sports video game in history, beating out the tennis video game series of the same time, Virtua Tennis by offering players the most authentic soccer experience in video games. FIFA's success saw the game evolve to a whole new level of realism and strategy in simulation sports games. The game pioneered this level of realism with first-person shooting, improved player animation and graphics, expansion of the player and team management, and gameplay innovations such as goal-line technology and computer controlled managers. Nearly 20 years later, the game continues to evolve with its commitment to innovation while offering a wide variety of exciting game modes like online multiplayer, franchise mode, and myCareer. Play as the world's greatest soccer team with over 250 players in the most accurate and realistic soccer game ever. Play with your friends in online multiplayer, competitively or cooperatively in ranked competitive online matches, prove yourself in league mode, manage your club in franchise mode, and create your own ultimate team in your career.
