This article will show how to install the Adobe Photoshop Elements version, latest version, and import photos from Flickr, including batch processing, to create a slideshow. If you don't have a photo hosting website, use flickr.com. Other alternatives are Google Drive and Albums. This tutorial is for Mac users. You will use an image of a beach, not our own image. To import images from Flickr, you will be using 'Photos' app. To import photos from Flickr, follow the steps below: Step 1: Connect to a Flickr Account First of all, you will need to have a Flickr account. Register at www.flickr.com and login. It has several advantages: Flickr provides you with a photo hosting website where you can upload and share photos. You can search for other people by visiting 'Groups' and view photos in a group. Flickr provides free tools to organize and edit photos. It provides its users with a library that is similar to a portable hard drive. It has easy tools to access this library so that you can edit photos with ease. You can also share photos with a link, which is easy to share. There are several Flickr accounts and groups where you can find free images. For this tutorial, we will use a free account that provides us with high quality images. Step 2: Open the app The next step is to open the Flickr 'Photos' application. You can open the App in 2 ways: Via the Mac Dock, double-click the Flickr icon or go to the Applications folder and drag the Flickr application icon to the Mac Dock. The icon appears in the Mac Dock. Via the Finder (Go to 'Go > Applications') the Flickr icon appears in the 'Go to Applications' folder, just click on it and drag it to the Mac Dock. If you see the icon in the Mac Dock, your account is associated with your Mac address. Step 3: Edit the photos After logging in to your account, in the left-hand side of the Mac desktop a category appears on the Mac home screen: 'Photos'. A catalog of photos is shown. The Apps or Photos category is a folder containing the images on your external hard drive, like the Pictures folder 05a79cecf1

Serum miR-122 expression in patients with chronic hepatitis B is increased with liver fibrosis and may serve as a biomarker of liver fibrosis. We sought to explore the expression of serum miR-122 in patients with chronic hepatitis B and to investigate the relationship between miR-122 expression and histopathological changes in liver tissue. We enrolled 60 patients with chronic hepatitis B, 32 patients with asymptomatic hepatitis B virus (HBV)-carriers, and 20 healthy controls (HCs). Patients were divided into a control group (n = 32), a high risk for end-stage liver disease (HRSLD) group (n = 28), a hepatocellular carcinoma group (n = 7), and a cirrhosis group (n = 7). The levels of serum miR-122 were measured by real-time quantitative PCR. The expression levels of serum miR-122 were significantly higher in the HRSLD and cirrhosis groups than in the control and asymptomatic groups (p < 0.05). Q: Concatenate Rows with Entries, where ID is same I have a table with data containing the same ID's (customer number). I would like to merge the rows of the same customer number. If the customer number is different, then just merge them. Here's a simple example of what I want: Column Value ID Code ----- 1 1 1 A 2 2 1 B 3 3 2 C 4 4 2 D 5 5 3 E How do I write this in SQL? Here is what I've tried: SELECT * FROM cte; Here's the results: Column Value ID Code ----- 1 1 1 A 2 2 1 B 3 3 2 C 4 4 2 D What am I missing? A: You could join on the Customer ID. Here, the final where filter is my answer: SELECT * FROM table1 t1 INNER JOIN table2 t2 ON t1.ID = t2.ID WHERE (t1.ID = '2' SQL Fiddle Demo The same can be done using conditional aggregation. This also provides more readability. SELECT a.ID, a.ID as Customer, a.CODE, b.CODE FROM table1 a LEFT JOIN table2 b ON a.ID = b.ID WHERE a.ID = '2'
