Any libraries or executables developed using the library may be used in the rest of the Sub2stl application as any other project using the libraries. If you're viewing this page, you probably see green screen. Green Screen is a technique of filming a video or a cartoon/movie scene with different colors of clothes, props, set or furniture. It is done to make the video more transparent for editing so that you can view your movie or video without the rest of the background. For the PS3, how much value does it have? Does it mean anything? I guess no, it's just some scenery in a video. However, there might be some uses for it. For instance, you can use it to make a movie with 3D models of the background rather than a still picture. This is done by using a 3D model of the person, props, set or furniture, and then "mixing" it with a video background. It's up to you to figure out whether it has some value or not. Ok, thanks! After I've watched this video by Zennon, I came to think it's probably not worth the time and energy because of the little percentage I gain from it. I mean, why bother about something with less than 1% of the total market (ps3 vita)? How about the Playstation 3? Are there other people who use it? Or does it help to be aware of it or at least know how it's done? Well, if there are people out there who is interested in the PS3 and not interested in
