Is there any way to hide the Elastic Beanstalk environment details? For example, i want to hide the Website url of the environments and run some post deployment scripts to replace the URLs in the source code files. A: You can currently do that by configuring a new environment (Cloud Formation Template) $ aws cloudformation create-stack --stack-name MyAppStack \ --template-url templateUrl.json \ --parameters ParameterKey=Environment,ParameterValue=test \ --capabilities CAPABILITY_NAMED_IAM and then configuring it to use the environment name "test" like so: MyAppStack ${Environment} The environment label doesn't need to be hidden and can be used as usual. If you want to do this automatically, you can use AWS CloudFormation - CreateEnvironmentCustomSettings which lets you do something like: ... "MyAppStackName" : { "Type" : "AWS::CloudFormation::CustomSettings" "Properties" : { "CustomSettings" : {

When white people have too much power white people are constantly talking about how they are oppressed. But, it is white males who really are the oppressed ones. Women, POC, the LGBTQ community, black people and all sorts of other minorities have won massive rights and liberties because of the efforts of white men. It is white males who are constantly in fear of being fired, taken off a team, kicked out of a club, and being kicked out of the country. It's white males who are constantly suppressed from voicing their opinions because nobody wants to hear them anymore. This ridiculous victim complex perpetuated by the white male is the very reason we now face a world where white people have too much power. The white male is the reason we are constantly wanting more power, even if it means more oppression for others. It is the same white male
