Not only has the ecologic crisis been largely a media construction but it was almost surely engineered as an instrument of geo-strategic struggles. Social countermovements and organizing of everyday life by people who are neither highly educated nor naturally inclined to activism is rising against this. The end of the Soviet Union left thousands of Russians disillusioned, disorganised and destitute. The US-led invasion of Iraq created a similar post-traumatic psychological state. In both cases, the humanitarian imperative to get people hooked on to alternative economies and lifestyles has been strong. The global warming crisis is every bit as real but is also being used as an instrument of geo-strategic struggle. The ecologic crisis is a 'disaster capitalism' generated by soaring corporate profits. The bulk of them go to a handful of speculative banks. It is the US state and its corporate underlings who constitute the main enemy. Addressing the unfolding ecological crisis is a major task. It requires radical rethinking and re-invention of everyday life on a much grander scale. In short, it is about weaning people off GDP/consumption as the central metric, and the core political force of environmentalism. The term 'ecological crisis' is not yet common. Some scientific journals have recently published some studies. All of them claim the ecological crisis is worsening and reaching a turning point. A mass mobilisation is under way, especially in Western Europe, to address the ecological challenge. Yet, it has become a contested terrain. The forces opposing this mobilisation are powerful. They include everything from the capitalist and bureaucratic posted the video of an attack on a reporter and photographer during a siege in New York. The reporter and photographer, Jon Campbell and Jonathan Bach, had been covering a siege at a building on East 91st Street when they were attacked at 7:45 a.m. on Tuesday by a man wielding a metal pipe. They were unhurt. After the attack, the man told Mr. Campbell that he was a political operative SearchÂ .News List of accolades received by Skyfall 25th December 2012. Skyfall may be the latest instalment in the James Bond franchise, but it has already been the recipient of numerous awards. The latest award to be announced is the one which has perhaps the most significance for the film - as this is the only one that has been given to a James Bond film. During the opening ceremony at the BAFTAs, Skyfall took home the award for Best British Film. The film has also been nominated for four Academy Awards, which include the Best Original Screenplay, Best Film Editing, Best Actor for Daniel Craig, and Best Sound Editing. Now we have the likes of Danny Boyle and David Fincher to name a few, there can only be one winner in Best Director and Skyfall is that lucky winner. Elsewhere, Lee Tamahori and Steve Suh have bagged nods for Best Production Design and Best Makeup and Hair respectively. The nominees for the Best British Film award were shown on the red carpet ahead of the ceremony, and included Mike Leigh's Mr Turner, which starred Timothy Spall, Charlotte Rampling and Andrea Riseborough. Skyfall was released last month across cinemas and on home video in the UK. For more information on Skyfall's upcoming DVD and Blu-ray release, please visit Sony's official website here. The following is a guest post by former CIA officer Philip Giraldi. A previous video, “The State Dept. and the Benghazi Attack,” presented the State Department’s role in denying the deadly attack on the Benghazi diplomatic compound. But for two weeks before that attack, and after, the State Department knew that a change in the CIA annex compound was necessary and took steps to have security agents from the State Department’s Diplomatic Security Service, or DOS, perform that duty. The development of that role by State was noted here and at the Inter Press Service. That story also reported that the DOS security team that was sent to Benghazi had a poor performance in Libya during the 2011 NATO uprising.
