Adobe Photoshop is a program for the modification, retouching and manipulation of digital photos. Originally it was created to be a raster graphics editor (originally released in 1987). Shortly thereafter the program became an authoring tool for bitmap images. The latest version is Photoshop CS6 (version 16.0) and was released in October 2014. Photoshop is a raster graphics program and is primarily used to create and modify images using pixels. It has a few image-editing features including enhancements and basic transformations. It supports layers, multiple windows, vector art and has a bitmapping system for editing images. It offers more than 100 filters. Photoshop is packed with tools and features that enable anyone to easily retouch, manipulate and enhance their images. Photoshop uses a layer-based editing system that enables raster image creation and altering with multiple overlays that support transparency. Photoshop is a raster-based graphic editing program but also supports editing vector graphics (.ai,.eps,.cdp,.eps) Photoshop is a professional level image-editing package. Its price varies depending on the version and additional features, and is used to create and modify pictures, advertisements, cartoons, posters, and websites. Some of the features that are included in the program are: Filters: Apply filters to images to change their appearance, including converting images to JPEG, adding text effects, adding vintage style to vintage photos, and such. Crop tools: Crop, resize and crop photos. Adjustment tools: You can tweak your photos with the adjustment tools, which include the brightness/contrast slider, hue/saturation tool, and the brightness/contrast tool. Layering: In Photoshop, all types of materials are supported in layers. You can add a new layer, move layers around, remove layers, or change their transparency.

Elements: The Elements added to Photoshop made it the best photo-editing program for photo-manipulation. This version includes a library of powerful tools for enhancing and retouching photos, including brushes, adjustment layers, the healing brush and more. A web crawler known in the art for gathering and storing information is described below. In general, a web crawler refers to a computer program that automatically browses the web, or files located on the internet. In this way, a web crawler may discover, store, and index new web pages. In the case of a well-formed web site, this document may include links to other documents including text, code, images and any combinations thereof. Accordingly, in this case, a web crawler may know which links in the document to follow. Once a link is followed, the document is then indexed (i.e., stored) and given a URL (Universal Resource Locator). In more detail, web crawling is defined in RFC 3988 which indicates that web crawlers are a black box—meaning that the individual components that compose a web crawler are typically incapable of explaining, or predicting, how the crawler finds and chooses web pages to visit. Currently, web crawlers are a huge industry with approximately 150 companies either designing and/or selling web crawlers. An important practical aspect of web crawling involves prioritization. In more detail, a web crawler may need to decide which web pages to visit first, and this decision is known as prioritization. In general, there are two methods to prioritize. The first method is provided by industry standards such as RFC 3305—which states that a crawler should prioritize links that are observed with a specified probability. This method may be limited by implementation in that a specified probability may only be able to be dynamically determined at run time. Accordingly, this method may be inadequate for dynamically determining a probability for a web page. The second method is provided by industry standards such as RFC 3305—which states that a crawler should prioritize links that are frequently observed and are likely to appear in other links. This method may be inadequate for dynamically determining a probability for a web page. In view of the foregoing, it would be an advancement in the art to provide a method and system that facilitates the crawling and prioritization of web pages.The lack of a web browser is the single biggest security vulnerability in Windows XP. (Shocker!) As a result, you can only access official Microsoft web pages and those you explicitly allow. And even that requires you to confirm your permission by setting a security popup to remember your password and then clicking an OK button to confirm your password will not be sent to

The right words make all the difference Words have power, and the right words can help you get the results you want. Out of choice, words can be manipulated. A skilled writer can change the shape of your words, and your message, to be much more powerful than you intended. In the same way, good marketing skills can give the impression that you've done all the hard work for your product when, in fact, you're speaking over it. And what you say, what you think, and what you do in the world can all help or hurt. So this is the bottom line for HWM: To achieve results, we have to work on the words we use to describe our products. We have to be able to tell our story and have a plan for every conversation. Our first step is to learn how to use words wisely. Why? Because it's a combination of skill and personality that makes a good sales person. This is the professional's first line of defense in selling. We believe that these skills and personality traits — this ability to infuse your words with meaning — are the keys to marketing success and selling. Who We Are The founders of HWM have been working on their persuasive writing skills for years, in many different fields. We've worked with C-level executives, small business owners, and salespeople. At HWM, we're trainers, writers, trainers, and consultants. We're professional speakers and have worked for Fortune 500 companies as well as a successful coaching practice. We've also taught for organizations that include Toastmasters International, the Scottish Institute of Motivational Speakers, and the Society of Chief Executive Officers. With a background in sales and marketing, HWM is a place where we put our skills to use to create results. The bottom line for HWM We love what we do. We're driven to help entrepreneurs, coaches, speakers, and trainers build successful businesses. We know that to produce the right results, words and action are what we have to work on — and that's what we're always working on at HWM.Q: Adjunction of $T^2 \times I$ to $T^2 \times S^1$ Let $X = T^2 \times I$ where I is a closed interval.
