behavior questionnaire (ABQ) with data collected from a sample of 29 youth with cerebral palsy (CP) aged 10-15 years. The validity of the ABQ was compared to an observation activity chart (OAC) which is an instrument frequently used in the assessment of functional abilities of CP youth. The ABQ and OAC were designed to capture adaptive behavior as adults perceive it and as it is expressed in real life situations. The results showed that the ABQ appears to have strong predictive validity for the level of independence achieved by this group of youth with CP and their families.
